

Near the main entrance of Washington Regional Medical Center stands an elm tree believed to be hundreds of years old. With roots running deep in the earth and branches extending outward in an amazing display, it serves as a fitting symbol of Washington Regional's commitment to the community. Washington Regional is the only not-for-profit, community-owned and locally governed hospital in Northwest Arkansas.

Our mission is to improve the health of people in communities we serve through compassionate, high-quality care, prevention and wellness education.

For 65 years, Washington Regional has been deeply rooted in Northwest Arkansas, and today—with a medical center, clinics and outreach services extending throughout the region—our physicians, nurses and staff members continue to do amazing things for the people we serve.

The mission of Washington Regional Medical Foundation is to support Washington Regional Medical System by promoting healthcare improvement through philanthropy and outreach services. For more than 25 years the Foundation has raised funds to support the many programs and services of Washington Regional. Washington Regional depends on the generosity of individuals, families, corporations and foundations to continue its tradition of excellence in patient care, medical research and education. In addition, the Foundation operates two non-medical outreach programs. Faith in Action promotes independence for homebound seniors through an all-volunteer base, and the Cancer Support Home provides support services to cancer patients and families in a non-clinical, home-like setting. Our mission to improve health is rooted deep, and like the elm's branches, we extend our reach to the health of the whole person.

We welcome your questions about our work and how your interest and support can help ensure improved health of our community for many years to come.
